Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Mitchell U.S Patent No. 5,903,278.

As to claim 1, Mitchell teaches a diagram system comprising:
a diagram that stores at least one shape element (Fig. 4); and,
an application program interface that includes a control that facilitates access to the diagram, the control maintaining state information associated with the diagram (lines 37-46 column 6).

As to claim 2, Mitchell further teaches the state information comprising at least one of selection, zoom and scroll position (Fig. 5 and associated specification).

As to claim 3, Mitchell further teaches the control captures operating system events (lines 47-67 column 6).

As to claim 4, Mitchell further teaches the control providing at least some of the operating system events to the shape element (lines 47-67 column 6).

As to claim 5, Mitchell further teaches rerouting at least one of paint, keyboard and mouse events to at least one of the diagram and the shape element (lines 47-67 column 6).

As to claim 6, Mitchell further teaches the diagram and the shape element responsible for painting themselves (lines 2-17 column 8).

As to claim 7, Mitchell further teaches the diagram and/or the shape element being responsible for responding to a user interaction (lines 47-67 column 6).

As to claim 8, Mitchell further teaches the shape element being based, at least in part, upon a model element class (lines 42-64 column 7).

As to claim 9, Mitchell further teaches the diagram being based, at least in part, upon a node shape that has a bounds property which defines its location and size, the node shape derived from the shape element (lines 25-41 column 7).

As to claim 10, Mitchell further teaches at least one shape element having a child shape element (Fig. 4).

As to claim 11, Mitchell further teaches the shape element derived from a presentation element (lines 4-24 column 7).

As to claim 12, Mitchell further teaches the shape element comprising at least one of a geometry property, a style set property and a shape fields property (lines 4-24 column 7).

As to claim 13, Mitchell further teaches the diagram having a graph object employed for hittesting (lines 25-41 column 7).

As to claim 14, Mitchell further teaches the shape element being control-less (lines 42-64 column 7).

As to claims 15-16, they are method claims of claim 1. Therefore, they are rejected for the same reasons as claim 1 above.

As to claim 17, it is a computer product claim of claim 15. Therefore, it is rejected for the same reasons as claim 15 above.

As to claim 18, Mitchell teaches a data packet transmitted between two or more computer components that facilitates diagramming (lines 11-22 column 5), the data packet comprising:

a data field comprising a diagram, the diagram comprising at least one shape element (Fig. 4), the diagram and/or the shape element being responsible for painting themselves (lines 2-17 column 8) and responding to a user interaction (lines 47-67 column 6).

As to claim 19, it is a computer product claim of claim 1. Therefore, it is rejected for the same reasons as claim 1 above.

As to claim 20, Mitchell teaches a diagram system comprising:

means for storing at least one shape element in a diagram (Fig. 4), the diagram and/or the shape element being responsible for painting themselves (lines 2-17 column 8) and responding to a user interaction (lines 47-67 column 6); means for accessing the diagram (lines 37-46 column 6); and, means for maintaining state information associated with the diagram (lines 37-46 column 6).
